THE LINCOLN AND JOHNSON FESTIVAL!

Magnificent Entertainment!
Toasts, Speeches, Music, Songs and a Good Time Generally!

Union Victories Handsomely Celebrated!

A GOOD DEED DONE FOR SOLDIERS' FAMILIES!

Last Tuesday evening was the time set apart by the loyal citizens of Janesville and Rock county, to suitably commemorate the greatest and most important political victory that has ever been achieved by the people since this Republic took its place among the nations of the earth. The great political crisis through which the nation has just so successfully passed, filled all hearts with rejoicing, and the occasion demanded that there should be some public recognition of it, and some public expression given to the pleasurable emotions that filled every heart. Accordingly arrangements were made for a Festival at Hyatt House Hall, that should fitly celebrate the election of Lincoln and Johnson, and at the same time be turned into the channel of charity, for the benefit of the families of those who are fighting our battles in front.

Of the sumptuous repasts prepared by fair and willing hands, it is unnecessary to say anything more than that it was such a one as the ladies of Janesville know so well how to provide. As a whole and in detail, it was a grand success, as can be proven by the four or five hundred ladies and gentlemen who partook of the same.

James M. Burgess, Esq., presided, assisted by the following gentlemen as Vice Presidents: Dr. John Mitchell, Daniel Johnson, Thomas Earle, S. J. M. Putnam, R. T. Powell, Joseph Spaulding, Daniel Clow.

After the respects of the audience had been paid to the ample viands, the feast of reason and the flow of soul, was inaugurated by the reading of the first toast by Mr. Mitchell as follows:

The AMERICANS—The safety, happiness and peace of the people, depend upon its purity, standing by the strongest arm of our fathers, and the firm and honest policies of those who have fallen in defense of our government and the American people say the Union shall not perish.

W. L. Mitchell being introduced spoke as follows:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—I have several times been requested to be brief and I will do. And why should I not? What words that I can utter will add to the estimation in which we all hold the Union of these United States? What words of mine will increase the veneration with which we all pronounce the name of George Washington "The Father of his Country." In theology it is an established principle that it is a greater work to save than to create. Washington and his compatriots, by the blessing of God upon their labors, formed and handed down to us the American Union. Reluctantly, but, as they thought, of necessity, they allowed one blemish to attach itself to the Union: a blemish, the mention of which in any civilized land, has always tinged with shame the cheek of every honest, patriotic American citizen. I feel devoutly thankful that we have a President, and by the action of the loyal people of the North on the 8th of November, we shall for four years to come have a President who has resolved to wipe out this blemish by throttling the dehumanizing institution of slavery and casting out the unclean spirit so that we may sit in the family of nations "clothed and in our right minds."

If then we speak with veneration the name of Washington who formed and gave us the Union, what words will add to the lustre of that descending glory which will settle upon the brow of the man who, in the midst of the fierce strife of faction in the North, and the deadly assaults of armed treason from the South, will preserve our Government and hand down to posterity a Union without a blemish, a land without a slave. I hope to live to see the day when we can sing of "the land of the free and the home of the brave," and not only pride to the noble deeds of our brave boys in blue to prove that this is "the home of the brave," but also point to universal emancipation, the glorious result of this war, in vindication of the truth of the claim that this is "the land of the free."

Music.—Hail to the Chief.

THE AMERICANS—Our protectors in whose hands are the destinies of the Republic, may they render redress to the wrongs of the people, stand by the strongest arm of our fathers, and the Grand Army of the Union, we offer our heartfelt pride and the sick and wounded soldiers we tender our warmest sympathy.

Responded to by C. G. Williams, Esq.: LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—The free state Maryland, which acted with almost entire unanimity throughout the Revolution, and furnished as many soldiers in that struggle as all the other slave states put together if we except Virginia; and which sent a proposition for immediate independence to the convention which was still in session at Philadelphia hesitating as to the best course to be pursued, and which proposition was read in that convention on the first day of July 1776, and only a few minutes before old John Adams made that remarkable speech which was too eloquent to be reported and to thrilling to be forgotten, and which probably induced that convention three days afterwards to adopt the Declaration of Independence which "proclaims" substantially the words which had for more than twenty years been inscribed on the bell which was then swinging over the top of the old Hall in which the convention was then sitting. Liberty throughout the land and to all the people thereof!" Maryland, the birthplace of William Wirt, the home of Samuel Chase, Luther Martin, old Charles Carroll of Carrollton and Col. John E. Howard who so gallantly led the old "Maryland line" in the battles of the Revolution. Maryland the lawn which leads to the front gate of our national capital, and with such history, is a theme worthy of consideration on any occasion.

But what shall we say of Maryland since she has become a free state? What shall we say of Maryland, repudiated, regenerated, sanctified, redeemed, freed from the vice of slavery, which she had pressed to her bosom for nearly a century—baptized anew in the waters of undivided democracy, as she steps forth of her own free will and joins the noble galaxy of free States, which now forms not only the church militant but the church triumphant.

The glory of the American armies! How shall it ever be forgotten! Written on every part of the continent, how shall it perish until the continent itself shall

The State of Wisconsin.—She has shown her love for the State by sending $9,000 of her sons to meet the traitorous foe. On over 100 field to the bugle and drum, and many have shown their services for patriotic courage. While we wring chapter for the living heroes, we scatter immortals on the graves of the dead.

To this toast Mr. James Sutherland responded:

He commenced by alluding to the fact, that a few years ago the territory comprising the present State of Wisconsin, excepting a few settlements which were made up on its margin by the missionary and fur trader, bore no traces of civilization. That many of us in our earlier days had regarded the territory of Wisconsin so remote, that we little dreamed of making it our future home. Now, however, we could boast of one million inhabitants, and that sixty thousand of our citizens had responded to the call to meet a traitorous foe. He then alluded to the advancement of Wisconsin had made in the development of her material resources, to her villages and cities, to her schools, her higher institutions of learning, the pulpit and the press. Then paid a just tribute of praise to the bravery of our soldiers, citing the immortal honors they had won, comparing them to the heroes of the American Revolution, and concluded by referring to the political victory we had aided in achieving at the recent Presidential election. Stating that our majority for the Union and a vigorous prosecution of the war, was not so large as we desired, yet we have reason to be proud that the voice of Wisconsin is heard ringing loud through all the land, in union with her sister states, that the American Union must and shall be preserved, and our Country continue to be a light to dark portions of the globe, a political Phœbus more luminous than ever, to guide the nations of the world into the haven of civil and religious liberty.

The above is only a very brief synopsis of Mr. Sutherland's excellent remarks.

Song by the Glee Club,

The Constitution.—We have escaped the curse and killed.

Mr. Nichols responded to this toast in part as follows:

We who believe in the declaration of independence, may well congratulate ourselves, the country, and the world, upon the auspicious result of this election. This result is a boon to the race. This election will form an important epoch in history; when liberty obtained firmer foothold, and higher vantage ground upon the hearts and consciences of men, and the rattle of the coarse dirt upon the coffin lid of slavery was heard. It is the breaking forth of the sun, after days and nights of clouds and storms. As the Jews after long and weary years of bondage in a foreign land, returned with joy and gladness to re-build their sacred temple at Jerusalem, and re-establish their religious worship, so we, having been released from our proslavery bondage, have returned to re-build the temple of liberty, to lay more firmly its corner stone, to erect anew its fallen columns, to repair its broken altars, and rear aloft its stately dome.

He then referred to this generation's attempt to preserve the heritage transmitted to them by a former generation.

He showed that slavery had ever been the central presiding force in the democratic party, and that all its leading measures were in conflict with the interests of the government. That copperhead treason consisted in adhering to those measures and preferring them to the welfare of the government. He then showed that the traitors of the present day are more guilty than those of former days, as they have had no excuse for their treason, and after remarking upon the tories of the revolution he concluded as follows:

Yet it must be remembered that England was their fatherland; their fathers' sepulchres were there. Great men and great deeds adorned its history. It was the abode of elegance and taste, of genius and art, of learning and refinement, of poetry and eloquence. Their religion had erected their altars and science achieved her proudest triumphs. England had then given birth to those immortal productions of the mind which enoble the race. Watts had swept the lyre of David with a master hand. Mansfield had administered justice as no other man ever had. Newton had carried the mind and plummet to the utmost barriers of creation, and explored the law whereby all created matter is held together and exists. He had weighed the hills in a scale, and the mountains in a balance. He had become as familiar with the planetary world as a boy with his top, and had reached forth and graced up the judgments of the universe. English enterprise had fuscined upon every shore, her sails whitened every sea, and the gossamer to waft the seeds of civilization round the world.

They were proud of England, its histories, its traditions, its memories, its glories. But all those considerations did not avail with the stern old revolutionary patriots and their posterity; and if these things are done in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry?

If these considerations did not avail these tories, where will the Chicago convention find a refuge from the indignant scorn and scathing rebuke of an outraged people, with no patriotic wish or act to illumine the sullen gloom of their treason?

They stand alone without associates in guilt; supreme in infamy.

But the government will move majestically on in spite of traitors and treason. Slavery will pass away, and copperheadism with it. The country will become in fact as well as in name, the land of the free and the home of the brave, the prince of all lands, the glory of the whole earth.

Music.—Jordan is a hard road to travel.

The LADIES OF THE JANKEVILLE A.S. SOCIETY.—In their field and at home they have by their labors to relieve suffering humanity, shown themselves to be ornate of this world, and to be fit to inherit the world to come. They will bless them. They will make for themselves names which will shine brighter and brighter at the world's roll on.

Rev. C. L. Thomson said in response to this:

I submit to you, Mr. President that my position to night is a very embarrassing one. It overwhelms me to hear my unworthy name linked with such illustrious company. If the Ladies will permit me to lay a temporary claim to them, I will say (and you will excuse the vanity) that like the colonel of the 10th Regiment of Pennsylvania Reserves, I can always brag on my Regiment. It was the standing boast of this Colonel that his regiment was equal to any in the Division for any purpose whatever. One morning an officer of a neighboring regiment came to the colonel, with very cheering news. "Colonel, we have had a refreshing time over at our camp. The Chaplain has been holding a series of meetings and this morning twelve men came forward and were baptized." The Colonel of the 10th Pennsylvania, drew himself to full height, and said "I have always said my regiment was unsurpassed in the Division and I'll stand to it now. Orderly, detail thirteen now, for baptism."

Mr. Chairman, my regiment is unsurpassed and in evidence, behold the detail they have made to-night. But while I brag on them personally I would feel very humble, and like the colored sentry, when first he donned the blue suit, dignified by the surroundings.

You remember he was standing guard, when a little officer was going to pass without designing to give the pass-word to a sable in blue.

But the sentry, rising to his full height, cocked and leveled his musket, challenged him again by way of explanation: "Don't care nothing for di uniform, but you's got to spec de uniform. I feel a similary humble solicitude, gentlemen, that you shall respect the uniform of the Ladies Aid Society, and indeed with consummate tact, they have managed in a way that is sure to secure that respect for the present occasion, for they have aimed at your heart, by a route, which Fanny Fern says is shortest viz., through your stomachs."

But when the memory of this evening has somewhat faded and committee of ladies meet you on the streets with only blank paper, asking for your name and a consideration attached, don't flinch but respect the uniform, and the uniform of an Aid Society is one that may well demand respect. There is a heroism of labor and suffering equaling that of the fierce conflict at the front. A few days ago I was told at Prair du Chien that when the new hospital was first located and Dr. Kelly had just taken charge, he received a dispatch one morning that two hundred sick and wounded soldiers from the time "When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God rejoiced for joy" at the laying of the foundations of the earth by the Almighty, music has been the hand maiden of religion, and the companion of patriotism.

When the oppressive host of Pharaoh, in the pursuit of a people whom the Lord was delivering from bondage, were overwhelmed by the waters of the Red Sea, "Then sang Moses and the Children of Israel this song unto the Lord, saying, 'The Lord hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and the rider hath he thrown into the sea.' And Miriam the prophetess, took a timbrel in her hand, and all the women went out after her with timbrels and dances, and answered them saying, 'Sing ye to the Lord for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and the rider hath he thrown into the sea.'" And we, to-night, will raise our glad voices in fervent songs of patriotic devotion, for the reason that the oppressive traitor of the South are rapidly being overwhelmed in the Red Sea of blood, which in their blinded and wicked soul, and without the shadow of an excuse they have caused to deluge our beloved land; and for the further reason that their sympathizers in the North have been buried out of sight in the waters of public scorn and indignation. And then the ladies rose to the emergency, and when the boat swung to the dock, they received a welcome and tender attentions that could have been surpassed only in the respective homes that sent them forth. For weeks and weeks these ladies were reaching the hospital. For such work our ladies here are ready, and for any sacrifices our country may demand.

There are two sets of uniform that kindle our enthusiasm, the blue, as it wrestles in the agony of the conflict for our altars and firesides, and the home-colors, that in darkened, lonely dwellings gleam brighter than an angel's robe; for suffering is greater than glory.

And then the ladies rose to the emergency, and when the boat swung to the dock, they received a welcome and tender attentions that could have been surpassed only in the respective homes that sent them forth. For weeks and weeks these ladies were reaching the hospital. For such work our ladies here are ready, and for any sacrifices our country may demand.

And we, to-night, will raise our glad voices in fervent songs of patriotic devotion, for the reason that the oppressive traitor of the South are rapidly being overwhelmed in the Red Sea of blood, which in their blinded and wicked soul, and without the shadow of an excuse they have caused to deluge our beloved land; and for the further reason that their sympathizers in the North have been buried out of sight in the waters of public scorn and indignation. The story of Whistlers—She has shown her love for the Union by sending $20,000 of her savings to the traitors. On every battle-field to the slaughter-pen of Altona, they have been sent to the front, and their courage, while it was not equal to that of the rebels, we scatter immortally on the graves of the dead.

To this toast Mr. James Sutherland responded:

We commenced by alluding to the fact, that a few years ago the territory comprising the present State of Wisconsin, excepting a few settlements which were made upon its margin, by the missionary and fur trader, bore no traces of civilization. That many of us in our earliest days, and regarded the territory of Wisconsin so remote, that we little dreamed of making it our future home. Now, however, we could boast of one million inhabitants, and that sixty thousand of our citizens had responded to the call to meet a traitorous foe. He then alluded to the advancement Wisconsin had made in the development of her material resources, to her villages and cities, to her schools, her higher institutions of learning, the pulpit and the press. Then paid a just tribute of praise to the bravery of our soldiers, citing the immortal honors they had won; comparing them to the heroes of the American Revolution, and concluded by referring to the political victory we had achieved at the recent Presidential election. Stating that our majority for the Union and a vigorous prosecution of the war, was not so large as we desired, yet we have reason to be proud that the voice of Wisconsin is heard ringing loud through all the land, in union with her sister states, that the American Union must and shall be preserved, and our Country continue to be a light to darker portions of the globe, a political Pharoah more luminous than ever, to guide the nations of the world into the haven of civil and religious liberty.

The above is only a very brief synopsis of Mr. Sutherland's excellent remarks.

The Correspondent.—We have reached the snick not killed.

Mr. Nichols responded to this toast in part as follows:

We who believe in the declaration of independence, may well congratulate ourselves, the country, and the world, upon the auspicious result of this election. This result is a boon to the race. This election will form an important epoch in history, when liberty obtained firmer foothold, and higher vantage ground upon the hearts and consciences of men, and the rattle of the coarse dirt upon the coffin-lid of slavery, was heard. It is the breaking forth of the sun, after days and nights of clouds and storms.

As the Jews after long and weary years of bondage in a foreign land, returned with joy and gladness to re-build their sacred temple at Jerusalem and re-establish their religious worship, so we, having been released from our pro-slavery bondage, have returned to re-build the temple of liberty, to lay more firmly its corner stone, to erect anew its fallen columns, to repair its broken altars, and rear aloft its stately dome.

He then referred to this generation as competent to preserve the heritage transmitted to them by a former generation.

He showed that slavery had over been the central presiding force in the democratic party, and that all its leading measures were in conflict with the interests of the government. That copperhead treason consisted in adhering to those measures and preferring them to the welfare of the government. It is then shown that the traitors of the present day are more guilty than those of former days, as they have had no excuse for their treason, and after remarking upon the tories of the revolution he concluded as follows:

Yet it must be remembered that England was their fatherland; their fathers' sepulchres were there. Great men and great deeds adorned its history. It was the abode of elegance and taste, of genius and art, of looting and refinement, of poetry and eloquence. There religion had erected her altars and science achieved her greatest triumphs. England had then given birth to those immortal productions of the mind which enabled the race. Watts had swept the lyre of David with a master hand. Mansfield had administered justice as no other man ever had. Newton had carried the line and plumb to the utmost barriers of creation, and explored the laws whereby all created matter is held together and exists. He had weighed the hills in a scale and the mountains in a balance. He had become as familiar with the planetary world as a boy with his top, and had roamed forth and gazed up the judgeons of the universe. English enterprise had fastened upon every shore, her sails whitened every sea, and were the gazeboe to waf the seals of civilization round the world.

They were proud of England, its histories, its traditions, its memories, its glories.

But all these considerations did not avail with the stern old revolutionary patriots and their posterity; and if these things are done in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry?

If these considerations did not avail these tories, where will the Chicago convention find a refuge from the indignant scorn and scathing rebuke of an outraged people, with no patriotic wish or act to illumine the sultry gloom of their treason?

They stand alone without associates in guilt; supreme in infamy.

But the government will move majesticly on in spite of traitors and treason. Slavery will pass away, and copperheadism with it. The country will become in fact as well as in name, the land of the free and the home of the brave, the prince of all lands, the glory of the whole earth.

Rev. C. L. Thomson said in response to this:

I submit to you, Mr. President that my position to night is a very embarrassing one. It overwhelms me to hear my unworthy name linked with such illustrious company. If the Ladies will permit me to lay a temporary claim to them, I will say (and you will excuse the vanity) that like the colonel of the 10th Regt. of Pennsylvania Reserves, I can always brag on my regiment. It was the standing boast of this Colonel that his regiment was equal to any in the Division for any purpose whatever. One morning an officer of a neighboring regiment came to the colonel, with very cheering news. "Colonel, we have had a refreshing time over at our camp. The Chaplain has been holding a series of meetings and this morning twelve men came forward and were baptized." The Colonel of the 10th Pennsylvania, drew himself to his full height, and said "I have always said my regiment was unsurpassed in the Division and I'll stand to it now. Orderly, detail thirteen now, for baptism."

Mr. Chairman, my regiment is unassisted and in evidence, behind the detail they have made to-night. But while I brag on them personally I would feel very humble, and like the colored suit, dignified by the surroundings.

You remember he was standing guard, when a little officer was going to pass without deigning to give the pass-word to a sable in blue. But the sotry, rising to his full height, cocked and leveled his musket, challenged again adding by way of explanation "Don't care nuffin for dis nigger, but you got to respect dis uniform. I feel a similarly humble solicitude, gentlemen, that you shall respect the uniform of the Ladies Aid Society, and indeed, with consummate tact, they have managed in a way that is sure to secure that respect for the present occasion, for they have gained at your heart, by a route, which Fanny Fern says is the shortest viz., through your stomachs.

But when the memory of this evening has somewhat faded and committee of ladies meet you on the streets with only a blank paper, asking for your name and a consideration attached, don't flinch then but respect the uniform, and the uniform of an Aid Society is one that may well demand respect. There is a heroism of labor and suffering equaling that of the fierce conflict at the front. A few days ago I was told at Prair du Chien that the new hospital was first located and Dr. Kelly had just taken charge, he received a dispatch one morning that two hundred sick and wounded soldiers from the lower Mississippi were en route for his hospital. The hospital building was indeed there, but not a quilt, a coat or a ration. And then the ladies rose to the emergency, and when the boat swung to the dock, they received a welcome and tender attentions that could have been surpassable only in the respective homes that sent them forth. For weeks and weeks these ministraries were continual until the government supplies reached the hospital. For such work our ladies here are ready, and for any sacrifices our country may demand respect.

When the oppressive host of Pharao in the pursuit of a people whom the Lord was delivering from bondage, were overwhelmed by the waters of the Red Sea. Then sang Moses and the Children of Israel this song unto the Lord, saying, "The Lord hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and the rider hath been thrown into the sea." And Miriam the prophetess, took a timbrel in her hand, and all the women went out after her with timbrels and dances, and answered them saying, "Sing ye to the Lord for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and the rider hath been thrown into the sea."

And we, to-night, will raise our glad voices in fervent songs of patriotic devotion, for the reason that the oppressive traitors of the South are rapidly being overwhelmed in the Red Sea of blood, which in their blinded and wicked zeal, and without the shadow of an excuse they have caused to deluge our beloved land; and for the further reason that their sympathizers in the North have been buried out of sight in the waters of public scorn and indignation, in the recent Presidential election.

Let not the glory of the mortal struggles in the army blind us to the heroism gleaming in the labor and the sacrifices of the watchers at home. Let us never forget that "peerless among patriots and peerless among women" are those who with a cheerful "God speed" send their husbands, brothers and lovers from their doors, and then turn back to darkened homes, now to work with eager hands for the soldier boys and men to pray to the soldiers' God.

There is a heroism of labor and suffering equaling that of the fierce conflict at the front. A few days ago I was told at Prair du Chien that the new hospital was first located and Dr. Kelly had just taken charge, he received a dispatch one morning that two hundred sick and wounded soldiers from the lower Mississippi were en route for his hospital. The hospital building was indeed there, but not a quilt, a coat or a ration.

Then sang Moses and the Children of Israel this song unto the Lord, saying, "The Lord hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and the rider hath been thrown into the sea." And Miriam the prophetess, took a timbrel in her hand, and all the women went out after her with timbrels and dances, and answered them saying, "Sing ye to the Lord for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and the rider hath been thrown into the sea."

And we, to-night, will raise our glad voices in fervent songs of patriotic devotion, for the reason that the oppressive traitors of the South are rapidly being overwhelmed in the Red Sea of blood, which in their blinded and wicked zeal, and without the shadow of an excuse they have caused to deluge our beloved land; and for the further reason that their sympathizers in the North have been buried out of sight in the waters of public scorn and indignation, in the recent Presidential election.

Let not the glory of the mortal struggles in the army blind us to the heroism gleaming in the labor and the sacrifices of the watchers at home. Let us never forget that "peerless among patriots and peerless among women" are those who with a cheerful "God speed" send their husbands, brothers and lovers from their doors, and then turn back to darkened homes, now to work with eager hands for the soldier boys and men to pray to the soldiers' God.
